INTRODUCTION

At Genworth Financial, we are focused on helping consumers build financial security at key stages of their lives. A priority focus is helping people plan for a secure retirement, including a sound strategy for dealing with the potential need for long term care.

Two-thirds of people over age 65 will need long term care in their lifetimes,¹ but many Americans have not proactively planned for this possibility. The cost of long term care continues to rise at a time when many American families have seen the value of their homes and investment portfolios dwindle as a result of the current economic downturn. Now, more than ever, it is important that families and their trusted advisors evaluate the options and begin to map out a financial security strategy to cover the growing cost of this vital care. And that's how our 2009 Cost of Care Survey can help.

Since 2004, Genworth – a global financial security company and the nation's largest provider of individual long term care insurance² with 35 years of experience – has conducted our benchmark Cost of Care Survey, the most comprehensive survey of its kind. This year, we analyzed data from more than 14,000 nursing homes, assisted living facilities, and home health and adult day health care providers to give Americans a better understanding of the cost of care across the country and in their local communities.

In addition to our annual cost of care findings and five-year trend data across various categories of care, two new features provide even greater insight into long term care affordability and choice.

- We've expanded our analysis from 90 to 331 regions across America to provide a more localized perspective.
- We've introduced the Genworth Choice & Affordability Index. This tool ranks regions where there is a greater number of nursing home choices at a more affordable cost in proportion to the area's 65+ population.³

We invite you to read the survey report and visit our interactive Web site at genworth.com/CostofCare, where you can compare costs across several locations and calculate future costs of care.

We hope these tools help you make informed decisions and proactively prepare for long term care costs today and in the future.

LONG TERM CARE OVERVIEW

Long term care is the type of care you may need if you have a prolonged physical illness, disability or cognitive impairment (such as Alzheimer's disease) that keeps you from living an independent lifestyle. These limitations may prevent you from carrying out basic self-care tasks, called Activities of Daily Living (ADLs). ADLs may include things such as bathing, dressing or eating.

The good news is that today consumers have options when planning for long term care needs. Here is an overview of long term care options available.

Homemaker Services

This service makes it possible for people to live in their own homes or to return to their homes by helping them complete household tasks that they can't manage alone. Homemaker services aides may clean clients' houses, cook meals or run errands.

Home Health Aides

Personal and home health aides help those who are elderly, disabled or ill to live in their own homes or in residential care facilities instead of in nursing homes. Home health aides may offer care to people who need more extensive personal care than family or friends are able to or have the time or resources to provide. Home health aide agencies are divided into two categories; Medicare certified and non-Medicare certified, licensed. Medicare certified agencies are certified to accept Medicare reimbursements, while non-Medicare certified, licensed agencies are not certified by Medicare to receive Medicare reimbursements.

Adult Day Health Care

Adult Day Health Care (ADH) centers can offer a much needed break to caregivers. This type of care provides service at a community-based center for adults who need assistance or supervision during the day but who do not need round-the-clock care. The centers may provide health services, therapeutic services and social activities.

Most consumers would prefer to receive long term care in their homes. In fact, 74% of Genworth's initial benefit claims are for home health care.¹²

There are at least three different "models" of Adult Day Health Care programs: social, medical and combined. All models are intended to offer socialization, supervision and structured activities designed for the individual needs of the participants at the center. Some programs may provide personal care, transportation, medication management, health-related services, intergenerational programming, social services, meals, personal assistance and therapeutic activities.

- Social Model. This model provides social activities, meals, recreation and some health-related services. The primary focus is on providing non-medical interactions such as basic care, supervision, social activities, transportation, meals and recreation.
- Medical Model. This model is typically for individuals who are frail or have health care problems. Generally, the medical model provides nursing supervision and medical monitoring for each participant. Medical model programs may also offer physical, occupational and speech therapy.
- Combination Model. Providers offering this model may provide both social and medical services. Usually a Registered Nurse (RN) or Licensed Practical Nurse (LPN) on staff oversees general health while participants take part in a variety of activities designed to stimulate cognition and movement.

Assisted Living Facilities

Assisted living facilities (referred to as Residential Care Facilities in California) are living arrangements that provide personal care and health services for people who may need assistance with ADLs, but who wish to live as independently as possible and who do not need the level of care provided by a nursing home. It's important to note that assisted living is not an alternative to a nursing home, but an intermediate level of long term care.

Nursing Home Care

Nursing homes are for those people who may need a higher level of supervision and care than in an assisted living facility. They offer residents personal care, room and board, supervision, medication, therapies and rehabilitation, as well as skilled nursing care 24 hours a day.

Learn the Levels

When talking about long term care, people may not think about the type or level of care they may need. Long term care can be therapeutic, rehabilitative or personal care delivered at home, in a community-based setting or in a facility. Here's how the levels of care differ:

- Custodial Care (Personal Care) is for those who need help with activities of daily living, and often involves non-medical personnel. An example would be having a helper come into your house to help with bathing, dressing or eating, and other ADLs.
- Intermediate Care is for those who need occasional nursing and rehabilitative care under the supervision of skilled medical personnel. It is less specialized and less comprehensive than skilled nursing care. Intermediate care is similar to skilled care, except it is provided on a periodic basis. The caring for a wound every eight hours, for example, is considered intermittent treatment.
- Skilled Care is for those who have medical conditions that require care by medical professionals such as a registered nurse or professional therapist. This higher level of care can include physical therapy or supervising the administration of intravenous medication.

LONG TERM CARE FINANCING OPTIONS

Another factor to consider in planning for long term care, of course, is how to pay for it. With median costs ranging from $38,896 to $74,208 per year depending on the type of care needed, finding a way to pay for long term care can be a challenge for many people. As an example, assuming the average stay in a nursing home is three years, costs can easily surpass $200,000 for the entire long term care event.

“Contrary to what most Americans believe and expect, Medicare does not provide meaningful coverage for long term care. And, help with Medicaid – the largest payer of long term care – requires individuals to spend down their income and assets to a level of impoverishment.”

Opening Statement of Senator John D. Rockefeller IV, Chairman, Subcommittee on Health Care, to the Senate Finance Health Subcommittee, March 25, 2009

People generally think there are three basic ways to pay for long term care: Medicare, Medicaid or private pay – either out of pocket or through long term care insurance. Those who are thinking of relying on Medicare or Medicaid to provide long term care services should be well informed about these programs.

Medicare

Generally, Medicare is the federal program that provides hospital and medical insurance to people aged 65 or older and to certain ill or disabled persons. Benefits may be available for home health care, but only if certain conditions are met. Medicare may pay for up to 100 days of care in a skilled nursing facility per benefit period – 100% for the first 20 days (after a three-day hospital stay, provided skilled care is needed). Then, for days 21-100, Medicare requires a co-payment. To help cover the co-payment, many seniors also have a Medicare supplement insurance policy. In general, once Medicare stops paying for care, the supplement payment will also end.

Medicaid

Medicaid (referred to as Medi-Cal in California) generally pays for certain health services and nursing home care for those with low incomes and limited resources. Medicaid may also pay for some long term care services at home and in the community. Medicaid has limitations on the amount of assets you can own and the amount of income you may receive each month before you are eligible for benefits. Who is eligible and what services are covered vary from state to state. There are also restrictions on transferring assets to others in order to qualify for Medicaid.

Self-Insure (or Out-of-Pocket Payment)

As you page through this report, you can look up the costs of various types of care in your state – private and semi-private nursing home; assisted living facility; home health aides and homemaker services. These costs can give you a good idea of how much money you or your family would need if you or a loved one required long term care.

Long Term Care Insurance

Long term care insurance helps pay for your care and protect your assets by reimbursing you for covered expenses up to the amounts set forth in your policy. Depending upon which policy you choose, this insurance can reimburse you for a wide variety of home, community-based and facility care services, and can offer you care options that may not be available to you through government programs.

Many states participate in the Long Term Care Insurance Partnership Program (“Partnership Program”). The Partnership Program was designed to encourage individuals to plan for their long term care needs by allowing them to retain more assets than would otherwise be allowed under state Medicaid eligibility requirement. As a result, policyholders are able to retain assets they would otherwise have to spend down prior to qualifying for Medicaid benefits. Individuals can participate in their state’s Partnership Program by owning a long term care insurance policy that meets the requirements for the Partnership Program.

Policies qualifying under the Partnership Program generally do not cost more than non-qualified policies with similar benefits.

EMERGING TRENDS AND FINDINGS

For the sixth consecutive year, Genworth has used a robust methodology to survey long term care service providers across the country. This year, Genworth expanded the survey beyond the 90 regions in 2008 by surveying 331 regions.

Looking back at five years of survey results, Genworth recognizes some emerging trends across the long term care services landscape. Overall, the cost of care among facility-based providers has steadily increased while “non-skilled care” related home care costs have remained relatively flat. For example, in 2005 the average median annual rate for a private nursing home room was $62,415, compared with the 2009 average median annual rate of $74,208. This means that Americans can expect to pay approximately $11,793 more per year today for a nursing home than they had to pay in 2005. This increase represents a 4.27% compound annual growth rate over that period.

Similarly, the monthly average median rate for a one-bedroom unit within a licensed assisted living facility has increased 4.8% over five years,¹³ excluding the one-time community fees that are typically charged by approximately one-third of all assisted living facilities surveyed.

In contrast to facility-based care, rates charged by home care providers for “non-skilled” services have remained relatively flat over five years. For example, whereas in 2005 the national, hourly private pay average median rate charged by a non-certified but licensed home health agency for a home health aide was $16.93, the 2009 hourly rate has only slowly crept up to $18.50. The historical compound annual growth rate for this type of care service has only been 1.66% over a five-year period. Home care rates have remained flat in part because of increased competition among agencies, the availability of unskilled labor, and by avoiding costs associated with maintaining stand-alone health care facilities.

THE GENWORTH CHOICE & AFFORDABILITY INDEX

This year, for the first time, the Cost of Care Survey report includes information to help families understand where they have the most choices for long term care service options at affordable rates.

The Genworth Choice & Affordability Index¹⁴ shows which areas of America offer the most choices, combined with affordability, for nursing home services. It is important to note that the index is not a listing based on the quality of care or the capacity of the facility, but simply a listing of the geographic regions offering the most affordable options. Favorable geographic regions are those identified as having the greatest number of providers in proportion to the number of people over age 65, while placing in the bottom third tier for cost.

According to the Genworth Choice & Affordability Index, the top 10 states for long term care affordability and choice are:

|---|--------------|----|-----------|
| 1 | IOWA | 6 | OKLAHOMA |
| 2 | SOUTH DAKOTA | 7 | MISSOURI |
| 3 | KANSAS | 8 | ARKANSAS |

METHODOLOGY

CareScout has conducted the Genworth Cost of Care Survey annually for Genworth since 2004. Located in Waltham, Massachusetts, CareScout has specialized in developing elder-care provider databases and helping families find long term care providers nationwide since 1997.

This year, CareScout – part of the Genworth Financial family of companies – contacted more than 54,000 providers to complete more than 14,000 surveys of nursing homes, assisted living facilities and home care providers in all 50 states, the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico during January, February and March 2009.

Considered the most comprehensive survey of its kind, the Genworth Cost of Care Survey was the first to publish cost results across 90 regions, touching every state. This year, Genworth expands the scope of the survey to help families, public policy representatives, financial planners and advisors, and others answer the question “What is the cost of long term care in my area?” To that end, this year’s expanded survey covers 331 regions across America, including research within most Metropolitan Statistical Areas¹⁵ (“MSAs”) in the United States. The number of attempted and completed surveys increased dramatically this year to expand the scope and statistical significance of the survey. In order to accurately determine the historical trends (both the prior year comparable trend and the inflation rate trend over a five-year period), CareScout reassembled the specific 2005 and 2008

Genworth Cost of Care Survey results into the newly defined 331 regions and converted former average dollar amounts into median dollar amounts, the measurement being used for the 2009 survey. As a result, families will find valuable current and historical information personalized to their geographic location.

In terms of scope, the Genworth Cost of Care Survey includes nursing homes, assisted living facilities, two types of home care providers (“Medicare certified and licensed” providers and “non-certified but licensed” providers) and adult day health care facilities.

Home Care (HC)

Researchers polled at least 17% of both certified and non-certified home care providers. The average percentage of completed surveys per region was greater than 31%. Researchers completed more than 4,000 HC surveys. All rates represent weekday (Monday-Friday) private-pay rates.

Where a rate range was provided, the midpoint was used. The survey excludes weekend and holiday rates. Some agencies charge a higher hourly rate when the patient uses fewer than four hours of services in a week; where such a practice was employed, researchers used the hourly rate associated with four or more hours of service in a week (that is, the rate more closely aligned with typical long term care services utilization).

CareScout separated home care providers into two different categories based upon certification status: Medicare certified home care agencies and non-certified but licensed home care agencies.

METHODOLOGY

For the 2009 Genworth Cost of Care Survey, researchers surveyed both home health care provider types to determine hourly private pay rates charged for the services of a certified home health aide. Home health aides provide personal care but not medical care. For example, a home health aide will typically help with bathing, dressing, transferring and toileting, but not with catheters or injections.

Also, researchers surveyed non-certified but licensed providers to determine the hourly private pay rates charged for the services of a homemaker.¹⁶ Homemakers do not provide hands-on care; their services typically include assisting with shopping, finances, cooking, running errands, transportation and/or providing companionship.

Results

Home care providers were classified into two types according to their certification and licensure status. The two provider types are:

- Medicare certified home care providers: these providers are also licensed.
- Non-certified but licensed home care providers (a.k.a. non-medical home care providers).

Researchers surveyed certified home care providers to determine the hourly private pay rates charged by such providers for the services of a “home health aide.” Researchers surveyed non-certified but licensed home care providers to determine the hourly private pay rates charged by these providers for the services of a “home health aide” and for the services of a “homemaker.”

Assisted Living Facilities (ALF)

Across 331 regions, researchers polled approximately 13% of the licensed facilities. The average percentage of completed surveys per region was 30%. More than 5,000 ALF providers completed the survey.

Unlike nursing homes, there is no national, uniform regulatory protocol for assisted living facilities. As a consequence, states have instituted licensing standards that vary from state to state. CareScout’s researchers interviewed assisted living facilities that were licensed according to the licensure requirements of the state in which the assisted living facility was located.

According to research conducted by CareScout, there are more than 70 different names or designations for facilities licensed as some form of an assisted care facility. Generally, only about 50% of these care facilities use the term “assisted living facility” as a part of their formal name or licensure designation. Another popular name or designation is “residential care facility.”

Researchers collected the monthly, base, private pay rate for a one-bedroom unit in an assisted living facility. They also determined whether the facility charges a non-refundable community or entrance fee – and if so, the dollar amount of the fee was determined. These one-time “community” and “entrance” fee rates are not included in CareScout’s calculation when determining the average monthly assisted living rate.

METHODOLOGY

The vast majority of monthly rates gathered are “all-inclusive” rates; that is, the rate includes the “rent” or facility costs as well as some minimum level of care-related costs. Sometimes, a facility will charge extra for health-related services (e.g., using “care level” gradations). The published monthly rates for this Genworth Survey do not include additional health-related costs where such costs were not communicated as being included in the rate.

Typically, the monthly rate includes three meals per day and sometimes includes basic care-related supervision. It does not typically include additional costs for care such as therapy, rehabilitation or medication. Where a rate range was provided, CareScout calculated and used the average of the high and low range rates.

To determine historical trends, CareScout relied upon Genworth Cost of Care Survey results dating back to 2005 to calculate five-year compound annual inflation rates.¹⁷

Nursing Homes (NH)

Across 331 regions, researchers polled at least 20% of all certified and licensed nursing homes and in no region did fewer than 10% of providers complete the survey. The average percentage of completed surveys within a region was 44%. More than 3,600 nursing homes completed the survey.

Researchers collected the daily rates for private rooms (single occupancy) and semi-private rooms (double occupancy) in Medicare-certified nursing facilities. Medicare-certified nursing homes represent more than 90% of all nursing homes in the U.S. Rates for transitional care units (typically hospital-based certified nursing homes) were not included. The daily room charge usually includes services beyond rent such as three meals a day, laundry, sundries, basic nurse supervision, and generic, non-prescription pharmaceuticals.

To determine historical trends, CareScout relied upon Genworth Cost of Care Survey results dating back to 2005 to calculate compound annual inflation rates.¹⁸

Adult Day Health Care (ADH)

Across 331 regions, researchers polled more than 34% of adult day health care facilities. The average percentage of completed surveys per region was 51%; 1,200 ADH providers completed the survey.

The survey evaluated the daily, hourly and half-day, private pay rates for sending an individual to an ADH facility for services. ADH is designed to meet the needs of adults who are functionally and/or cognitively impaired. Programs are intended to be structured and comprehensive, and to take place in a protective setting that promotes well-being through a variety of health, social and other support services. These services are intended to help enable individuals to live more independently in the community. They also may be intended to provide some relief for family caregivers.

METHODOLOGY

Rate Structures

- Daily Rate: rate charged for approximately 6-8 hours of service
- Half-Day Rate: rate charged for approximately 4 hours of service
- Hourly Rate: rate charged for an hour of service

In interpreting the survey results, where a daily range was provided that included a low-end rate range of less than $25, the high-end rate within the range was used. For example, where the ADH provider charged between $0.00 and $40 “depending upon income level,” CareScout used the $40/day rate. Where the ADH provider charged between $25 and $40, for example, CareScout used the midpoint of the range. This method proves conservative in that it avoids underestimating the private pay cost of ADH due to the “$0.0” rates for people who cannot afford the care. Where three rates were provided for three levels of care, CareScout used the middle care level rate. Where an hourly range was provided, CareScout used the average of the range. If the hourly rate started with $0.00 on the low-end of the range, then CareScout used the high-end hourly rate within the range. All rates exclude transportation fees.

³ The Choice & Affordability Index does not measure or reflect the long term care services capacity (number of beds) available in a region, or the quality of care. Rather, the index reflects the number of facilities in the region in proportion to the 65+ population along with the cost of care in that area.

⁴ Percentage increase represents the compound annual inflation rate for surveys conducted by Genworth from 2005 to 2009.

⁵ Ibid

⁷ Percentage increase represents the compound annual inflation rate for surveys conducted by Genworth from 2005 to 2009.

⁸ Data has only been collected for the past two years, so five-year annual growth rate is not available.

¹⁴ The Choice & Affordability Index does not measure or reflect the long term care services capacity available in a region, or the quality of care. That is, they do not take into account the total number of nursing home or assisted living beds or number of home health aides available in a region. Rather, the index reflects the number of facilities in the region (not the number of beds) from which a consumer can select. Therefore, as an example, while the New York City area may have a limited number of choices from which to choose for long term care services, New York City nursing homes may be large enough to supply the capacity needed for the region (that is, they may have many beds).

¹⁵ The Genworth survey covers 331 regions, including 276 MSAs as defined by the U.S. Census Bureau. Consistent with its mission to bring a granular view to certain large MSAs, the survey breaks the New York City and Washington, D.C. MSAs into smaller regions defined by counties, consistent with methodology employed by CareScout for the previous six years. For example, parts of the New York City MSA are segmented into a northern New Jersey region ("NJ-Northern NJ") and a southwest Connecticut region ("CT-Bridgeport"); in addition, parts of the Washington, D.C. MSA are segmented into a Baltimore region ("MD-Baltimore") and a Bethesda region ("MD-Bethesda"). Therefore, the total 331 regions comprise 276 MSA regions, four additionally segmented regions, and 51 "rest of state" or entire "state" regions.

¹⁶ Homemaker services are sometimes also referred to as "personal care services," or "companion" services.
